If a sick bird comes to your feeder, minimize the risk of infecting other birds by cleaning your feeder area thoroughly. If you see several sick birds, take down all your feeders for at least a week to give the birds a chance to disperse. Remember that prevention is the key to avoiding the spread of disease.

By the time the bird begins to show the signs of sick-bird syndrome, it may be in an advanced stage of illness, so timely medical intervention is essential. This is because the bird has been hiding his illness from us, which is an evolutionary survival mechanism common to all species of birds. Sick-bird syndrome is typical for almost any disease.
